I support MLPA Proposal 2.

There is no sense in closing salmon season completely. There are insufficient water ways in California that the salmon even if they do make it up river will die off. You need to figure out the whole water diversion before you can make radical measurements like the immediate closure of a salmon season. When the numbers are even lower this year who will you then blame? It could not be the salmon fisherman could it? I'm sure you will find another group of people to blame like the caribou of Canada are responsible for the depleting numbers.

Tim
